I have tested twenty-six varieties of strawberries within the past nine years. All stand the climate well except one, the Agriculturist, which sun-burned. I believe we can raise as good strawberries here as in any part of the state. Five of the best varieties in my collect tion are the Jucunda, Wilson, Russel's Prolific, Triumph DeGrande and Kentucky. In this connection it may be well to remember that our crop of strawberries mature at the time when the supply is running short in our large cities. With the completion of railroad facilities. there seems no good reason why the strawberry crop of this region may not find a profitable market in Detroit and

Mr. Smith also raises a fine collection of flowers. He says: "Roses of every description flourish here to perfection.
